NOTICE.

Owing to the length of the report of the hanging of Wm. Taylor and the history of the crime, trial, etc., we have been compelled to lay over much that is of interest in the way of editorial matter, correspondence and miscellany.

The new constitution of New York makes it a misdemeanor for any public officer to use a free pass on any railway, or accept free service from any telegraph or telephone company. It makes hooking, pool selling and every species of gambling criminal offenses.

Every voter in America should understand that the Sugar Trust is the special pet of the Republican party; that every Democrat in the Senate, with the exception of those from Louisiana, voted against it, while every Republican and Populist voted for it when the subject was before the Senate recently.

The acceptance of foreign governments continue to come in with surprising regularity. Just before Christmas the cable announced that the Argentine Congress had voted an appropriation of $15,000 to make an exhibit at the Cotton States and International Exposition. This is one of the most enterprising nations in South America, and Buenos Ayres, with its half million people, is called the New York of South America.

Florida will have a unique exhibit at the Cotton States and International Exposition. It will consist of a phosphate pyramid one hundred feet high, and the base and fifty feet high. The exterior will be covered with pebble phosphate, and the interior will be finished in Florida woods and filled with products of the peninsula. This display will be made by the Plant system of railways, through D. H. Elliott, manager of the land department.

The arrangements for transporting exhibits and passengers to and from the Cotton States and International Exposition will be very satisfactory to the public. Exhibits for the Woman's Building will be carried free of charge by the lines of the Southern Railway and Steamship Association. Other exhibits return free after paying full fare coming. A passenger rate of one fare for the round trip will be made by most of the railways of the country. Within 150 miles of Atlanta a rate of one cent a mile will be given on the Georgia Railway. The Pacific Mail Steamship Co. will carry exhibits from South and Central American points reached by its lines free of charge, and will make liberal concessions to passengers visiting the Exposition.

Judge Edwards decides that Eleemosynary institutions may be taxed on outside real estate. The Judge held that the question is "Do institutions of purely public charity, and institutions of education not used or employed for gain by any person or persons, and the income of which is devoted solely to the cause of education, as held in Section 170 of the new Constitution, embrace real estate purchased by such institutions in all parts of the State, other than the place where the institutions have their habitation?"

"It must be admitted that if the rules of construction of statutes are strictly applied, the contention of plaintiff is quite plausible, but that if construction is given to that section, it follows that if the different educational or charitable institutions of the State be fit to invest their assets in real estate in this city, as the plaintiff has done, the entire real estate of the city, or nearly so, might be exempted, and thus deprive this city of any sources of revenue from realty."

"The Constitutional Convention certainly never intended such a result. It would be contrary to public policy, and the debates in the Convention indicate a contrary intention.
"Institutions, as used in the section, supra, in the opinion of the court, were intended to be limited to the local property of such institutions, say buildings, grounds or other property, so situated as to constitute a part of the institution itself."
On these grounds Judge Edwards sustained the demand of the petition.

The case will be taken to the Court of Appeals.
NO NEED FOR DELAY.
A gentleman crank, confidently asserting that he knows what he is talking about, predicts that Chicago will be wiped off the face of the earth at the end of two years. But why wait two years?—Glasgow Times.

TO PREVENT FROST WINDOWS.

All of us know what a nuisance steam or frost windows are in cold weather. A very thin coat of glycerine applied to both sides of the glass will prevent any moisture forming thereon, and will stay in it so long that it can be seen through. For this reason it should be put on very thin. Surveys can use it on their instruments in foggy weather, and there is no film to obstruct the sight. In fact, it can be used anywhere to prevent moisture from forming on a surface.

THE BEST MAN.

A budget of Irish stories has gained circulation on the Home side. An undersized son of the Emerald Isle walked into a saloon one day, with his hat knocked over his ear, his clothes torn, and a collar hanging about his shirt by a single thread.
"What happened?" asked the bartender.
"I was at a wedding," said the Carry.

"At a wedding?" exclaimed the bartender, "yes, name a wake."
"No, I name a wedding," I think I ought to know, I was there."
"Well, what happened?"
"I went to the wedding, and the first man I met was a little bit of a Jude in lavender pants, a long-tailed coat, and a white waist coat."
"Who?"
"I'm the best man," sez he, and he was."

THE PNEUMATIC TIRE.

An interesting series of experiments have been made recently to test the difference between the draught or road friction of a carriage with or without the modern pneumatic tire wheels. Two ordinary box huggies were employed, each being weighted to weigh 254 pounds. On a smooth hard pine floor it was found that the power required to start the pneumatic tire from a standstill was four pounds and the power required to start the steel tire carriage was three pounds. Next an obstruction 5-16 of an inch high was placed in front of each carriage, and it was found that 25 pounds was required to haul the steel tire carriage over the obstruction and but 11 pounds to draw the pneumatic tire carriage.

Similar experiments with obstructions of various kinds showed that about the same advantage was maintained by the pneumatic tires. To haul the two carriages over an ordinary sand road it was found that the steel tires required about 40 pounds and the pneumatic about 25 pounds. A great many experiments of the same nature showed little or no variation in this proportion.—Scientific American.

FOOT BALL.

THEY ARE MARTYRS.
In the killing off of a few foot ball players and prize fighters, it is an end is thereby put to these brutal sports, the men may have said to have died for a good cause.—Owensboro Messenger.

TOUCHDOWN TO AVALANCHE.

Foot ball reigns triumphant. From the booming West comes the news that the game has been the means of saving the souls of the ungodly. A young Baptist minister, newly assigned to a church in Minneapolis, Kansas, found his charge in the last stage of disintegration—no congregation and no apparent hope for a revival of interest in church affairs. At first he was despair. Then he organized a foot ball team in the town and coached it to a glorious victory over a neighboring and rival town. The next Sunday his church was packed to the doors, and, according to a newspaper account, "standing room could have been sold for enough to establish a heathen mission." And yet there are ministers who condemn the great American game.—Buffalo News.

HIS MOTHER-IN-LAW.

"One of the funniest experience I remember of my boyhood time was that of a couple in our neighborhood who ran away and got married," said a man at the Union Depot last evening. "After the bride and groom were over the couple went to the young lady's home to make peace with the old folks. The young lady's father met them at the door, and taking his daughter by the arm, thrust her into a room and locked her up and gathering up the shotgun ordered his son-in-law off the place and threatened his life if he ever returned. The young man went home and sat down and did some hard thinking. Finally he sent word to the young lady's mother for her to come and get her daughter's clothes and everything that belonged to her. She did so, and the young man held his mother-in-law as a prisoner and hostage for the return of his wife. He, too, took a shotgun and stood guard.
"The second day after the father of the young lady came over to negotiate a surrender of prisoners. As soon as he came in sight he waved his white handkerchief in token of a truce. The result was a mutual exchange of prisoners. The young man made such a good impression upon his mother-in-law during her captivity that all differences were patched up and the hatchet was buried.—Louisville Post.

KENTUCKY'S CRIMINALS.

AN INCREASE OF CONVICTS OUT OF PROPORTION TO THE GROWTH OF POPULATION.
The annual report of Col. Henry George, Warden of the State Penitentiary, shows that on November 30th there were 1,136 convicts in the institution, as compared with 1,101 a year ago.
Of the 1,136 in confinement, 133 are serving life sentences.
Of the 561 convicts received from Sheriffs during the year one-fifth of them were under 20 years of age, more than one-half were under 25 years of age, and four-fifths of them were under 30 years of age.
Of the 561 received, 96 were received only one claimed to have a good education, and 234 had a common education, and 226 had none.

Of the 561 received 429 claimed to have been drunk when they committed the crimes for which they were sent up, and 132 claimed to have been sober at the time. Of the 561 received 374 gave their occupation as laborers.
The cost of feeding and clothing the prisoners was an average of 14-25 cents per day per convict. The net earnings of convict labor was $5,838.66, which only lacks $80.71 of feeding and clothing them for the year. The report also shows that while the population of Kentucky has increased since 1881 only 20,949, or 13-13 per cent, the prison population has increased from 905 in 1882 to 1,714 in 1894, or nearly double in eleven years.

MOST WONDERFUL VILLAGE OF CLIFF-DWELLERS EVER DISCOVERED.
The most wonderful village of cliff dwellers extant has just been discovered in the Bradshaw Mountains, Arizona, says a special to the Cincinnati Post, and an exploring party is now organizing to visit the place and thoroughly inspect it. The village is in one of the most inaccessible canyons of that remarkable range and has never before been seen by white men. Some wonderful discoveries were made.
The canyon was stumbled on by accident by two prospectors. White and Williams, who did not attempt a thorough exploration, owing to the great size of the ancient settlement. From the description they give there is no doubt that this is the largest village of the kind ever discovered. It is situated along the high banks of Willow Canon, and the houses are estimated to number 260.
It is a difficult matter to reach the canyon, even with pack animals, which accounts for its having been so long undiscovered. There are three natural terraces in the canyon wall, and the dwellings open back from them. Narrow steps in the rock, now almost worn away, seem to indicate that this was the method employed in ascent and descent.

Several of the houses were explored and large quantities of pottery and some instruments, evidently used for cultivating the soil, were found. In one house a skeleton of a man was discovered, not over four feet eight inches in height. The canon at this place is half a mile wide and shows every evidence of having been cultivated. If this proves to be a fact on later examination, it will throw new light on these mysterious people of long ago. As far as known, no other evidence of cultivation 1st ever been discovered of this departed race.

NEW YORK FASHIONS.

FANCY TABLE LINENS: EMBROIDERED LENOX CLOTHS: FASHIONABLE JEWELRY: THE "DIANA CREST" EMPIRE FANS.
Heretofore, German handwork, Fayal embroidery and drawn work, were the principal ornaments of high-class fancy table linens; but Venetian and French handwork, together with Renaissance lace, may now be added, constituting many beautiful designs, which are often a reminder of popular styles in dress materials or millinery; garlands of violets adorning table cloth borders, and dainty Dresden figures in connection with Honiton braid, bringing about very attractive combinations. A decided preference is expressed for small figures in new table cloths, such as ivy leaves, clover leaves, acorns or blades of grass knotted together, and usually the border is of similar pattern, somewhat enlarged, with perhaps the addition of satin-finish dots.
LUNCHEON CLOTHS.
admit of much ornament, and a beautiful one shown by a leading house, has three rows of hemstitching inside the border, and the center is filled with flowers (the end not meeting) occupying almost the whole center, done in raised embroidery of Venetian green silk, with twelve napkins to match, each having a corresponding spray at one corner. A second fancy cloth has wreaths of violets (natural colors) woven in the border with napkins similarly adorned. Table napkins vary greatly in size, thirty-nine inches square being one extreme, and large fringed doilies the opposite. Center pieces and buffet scarves are still about the usual size, and may have a plain center and deep edge in Venetian or French handwork, or wide scalloped edges, embroidered in yellow silk, with clusters of large and small chrysanthemums at irregular intervals.
THEY AGAIN
centre pieces are of Renaissance lace, with embroidered flowers among the leaves, and this material is simply a strong, heavy reproduction of what is now so fashionable for collars or capes. Ornamentation is fairly lavished upon finger-bowl doilies or fancy mats, and white silk Russian lace doilies with silk centres, on a velvety blue or white, or grape-leaf lace covered with embroidery in shaded green silk, set around on a white cloth, convey some idea of the beauty of present styles; and it is noticeable that the demand for colored embroideries has increased; good housekeepers realizing that by using Ivory soap, the colors will last as long as the material holds together.

A LADY'S COSTUME
is incomplete without a handsome buckle on the collar, according to the variety of oblong, square, round or oval buckles, cause a profound respect for human ingenuity, and those who object to very large ones, compromise the matter by wearing two or three. The "Diana crest" assists in the utter annihilation of the brooch, and is both large or small, composed of a novelty of design, in order that it may be within the means of all classes. This new toy does not imitate Nature's great luminary very closely, as the points are now open, although in very expensive crests, one is put within the other in such a way, that the ends are brought much nearer together. A slender gold chain, passing through a precious stone, and drawn up or enlarged at pleasure, with one end loose, is called the "sliding bracelet," and usually the end terminates in a jeweled ball.
THERE IS A GREAT DEARTH of novelties in watches and chateaux, the different arrangement however of such exquisite embellishments as enameling, hand-painting and all precious stones necessarily constitutes much of the new. A miniature binnacle (a marine instrument) is a novelty of watch, the case being about the size of a three cent piece, and entirely out of sight until the handle is turned up.

THE GENUINE EMPIRE FAN
is just eighteen inches long; is studded with small silver and steel figures, and has mother-of-pearl sticks. Larger varieties have two miniature heads, painted on gauze, or two figures framed in painted scroll work, set off by flowers formed of very minute sprigues.

WHAT TO SEE IN THE NATIONAL MUSEUM.
Washington is the great Mecca of America. No city in the country is visited annually by such countless numbers of annual couples, and hosts of sightseers of a less interesting class. One of the places which every one visits is the great National Museum, where the government has on exhibition thousands and thousands of interesting objects. The average visitor wanders about from room to room giving a glance only at each case, and goes away tired physically, and confused mentally, with the perplexing immensity of the exhibition.
For the benefit of those who may hereafter visit the museum I will describe a few of the things, some of them out-of-the-way corners, which every one should surely see. The great war cloak of the early kings of the Sandwich Islands is one of the most curious and interesting exhibits. This was made of coarse cloth covered with red, yellow and black feathers arranged in a peculiar design. The yellow feathers were obtained from a rare native bird which must be captured alive and set at liberty after the tuft of yellow feathers found under the wings are pulled out. Three of these feathers would bring, in former, mounds of the value of one dollar and fifty cents. The cloak was about one hundred years in making, and was finished in the eighth reign of its beginning. It constituted a most cherished possession of the crown, and at present rate of wages cost more than a million of dollars, or more than the Orloff, Pitt or Kohinoor diamonds are worth.

In the room devoted to invertebrate zoology, in a case by themselves, will be found the precious great auk's egg and skeleton, to see which the enthusiastic ornithologist may well make a pilgrimage across the continent. The great auk was once found in great numbers on Punk's Island, near Newfoundland. The early Dutch navigators found them so tame and stupid, that when in want of fresh fowls they would lay their ships alongside the shore and drive the birds on board, evidently used for eating. At the time the birds were all killed off, the last pair being taken in Iceland in the year 1844. Six years ago a single egg of this bird was sold at auction in London for $1,200. The specimen which the government owns is in perfect condition, but the skeleton is made up out of a job lot of old bones.

One of the few things I remember having seen at the Centennial was a pair of boots made out of the tanned epidermis of homo sapiens, in other words of human skin. This gruesome but fascinating object is now in storage not having been unpacked since its return from the World's Fair. The leather to the uninitiated resembles perhaps coarse Morocco, and the boots look as if they would stand good service. In Europe the skin of criminals has frequently been tanned for such use. Let us hope that the "tough citizen," whose hide was worked up into the boots by an American tanner, was at least of foreign birth.

The original Francis life car is to be seen in one of the side rooms. This car was constructed by Joseph Francis, and was taken to the New Jersey coast for trial. During a terrible snow storm on the night of January 12, 1890 the ship Aysheire was wrecked, and the car was drawn out to it by means of a line tied to a ball which was fired from a cannon. Load after load of human freight it carried in safety through the breakers to the shore. The two hundred passengers and forty-eight of the crew were thus rescued from what would otherwise have been certain death. This car was never afterwards used, but was presented by the government to the inventor "to be preserved as a relic for all coming time." For that purpose it was deposited by the inventor in the National Museum.

Everybody who goes to the museum of course, looks first at the relics of George Washington and General Grant. These are in cases directly in front of the main entrance and guarded night and day by special policemen.
The government maintains a large force of curators and assistants whose sole duty seems to be to disarrange and rearrange the various objects. They are continually carrying things from one part of the building to another, and one is never certain where he will find an object he wishes to see. To an occasional visitor an important part of the interest felt is in finding a solution to their latest plan of classification. For many years the writer has upon each visit tried to locate a large case containing life sized figures of a Japanese man and woman who appear to be engaged in an instant flirtation. It would be a safe estimate to say that in fifteen visits the case was found in at least a baker's dozen different parts of the building. For that reason it is usually impossible to direct people where to go to see certain objects.

Any one who has children will rejoice with L. B. Mulford, of Plainfield, N. J. His little boy, five years of age, was sick with croup. For two days and nights he tried various remedies recommended by friends and neighbors. He says: "I thought I would lose him. I had seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised, and thought I would try it as a last hope, and am happy to say that after two doses he slept until morning. I gave it to him next day and a cure was effected. I keep this remedy in the house now and as soon as any of my children show signs of croup I give it to them and that is the last of it." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by W. F. Powers and T. S. Military Department For Jackson.
Capt. Wygant, and Mr. H. D. McClincock, went to Jackson last Thursday to organize a military company among the students of Jackson College. Capt. Mc-Clincock will remain permanently and will have the Military Department under his supervision. The Jackson school is full in all departments and there are more classes than before.

In Olden Times
People overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action; but now that it is generally known that Syrup of Figs will permanently cure habitual constipation, well-informed people will not buy other laxatives, which act for a time, but finally injure the system.

He made many friends in the parish. While he had his faults there is one noble characteristic for which, as a soldier, he was distinguished, and one that should always make his memory like McPiereson's, esteemed by our people, and that is, he was chivalrous and kind alike to this city, Friday night, Dec. 7th, 1894, at about 7 o'clock p. m. Some of his work mules and horses had been ridden nearly every night by someone, and he had been posted by Green Kavanaugh, a colored farm hand who was employed on the farm and lived in a cabin near the residence, to look out for the person or persons Friday night.

nights. All I know is what Mr. Doty had told me. Mr. Doty told me the conversation between himself and Kavanaugh and that Kavanaugh told Mr. Doty if he would watch Friday night that he would find who was riding his horses. After Mr. Doty left the house before I heard the shot it was some time, it must have been fifteen or twenty minutes, I never looked at the clock. I stand, returned into court a verdict of guilty and fixed your punishment at death. Have you now any cause to show why the judgment of the court and sentence of death should not be pronounced against you? No, you have none. Your crime, according to your own voluntary confession out of court, according to your own voluntary testimony upon the trial, was determined by your jury and you
